

The “Eleftherios Venizelos” Airport of Athens

The Athens International Airport "Eleftherios Venizelos" is the main airport in Greece and is located at a distance of 25 km from Athens.

It is a modern airport that serves the main bulk of passengers to and from other international and national airports. It is also one of the major hubs of transit trade in the country.

Metro, buses and taxis are available for the movement of passengers from/to Athens and interurban electric train station connects it with the Peloponnese.

